World's most bizarre suicide!

WOMAN EATEN ALIVE BY 100s OF HUNGRY CROCS

By JOE BERGER

Bride fed herself to savage beasts after boyfriend canceled wedding!

A weeping woman driven to despair by a romance gone bad leaped into a pond with hundreds of hungry crocodiles — and let the savage beasts eat her alive!

Dozens of tourists watched in horror as the ferocious reptiles ripped shrieking Sirikit Rakansuk to shreds at a crocodile farm on the outskirts of Bangkok, Thailand.

"It was the most gruesome, ghastly thing I've ever seen," British businessman Roland Owens later told reporters. "She jumped in and the crocs were on her in seconds. One minute she was there and the next minute she was gone — and there was nothing anybody could do to save her.

"I'll have nightmares about this for the rest of my life."

Bangkok cops said lovesick Sirikit, 23, picked the grisliest method of suicide she could think of after her former fiance canceled their wedding plans.

"She wanted to shock her boyfriend, and I'm sure she already did that," said police investigator Ayhon Samutrua.

"But it was a terrible price to pay for a lost love affair."

Grieving girlfriend Lee Sirivatanon told police the heartsick secretary had talked about taking her life since breaking up with her beau three weeks earlier.

"She was really crushed and she said she couldn't go on living," Lee recalled. "She said she was going to do something terrible to herself so her boyfriend Prateb would feel bad for leaving her.

"None of us imagined she would actually kill herself."

But one sunny afternoon, sad-eyed Sirikit boarded a bus and rode to the Samut Prakan Crocodile Farm with 40 camera-toting tourists.

The moment they arrived, the shaken lady tried to climb the fence circling the cesspond but a man grabbed her legs and pulled her down.

"She was acting strangely, but everyone thought she was just trying to get close to the crocodiles for a better look," said tourist Roland Owens.

"When the man pulled her down, she started to walk away — and then she ran toward the fence and climbed over before anyone knew what was happening.

"Then she was in the water and those crocodiles were all over her. We could hear her pitiful screams and see the water fill with blood. Then everything was quiet and we knew the poor girl was gone."

TOURISTS watched in horror as a weeping girl plunged into a crocodile-infested pond — and was quickly ripped to shreds by hundreds of the hungry, savage beasts.

Love potion backfires . . .

A pain hubby to sleep!

An impotent husband hoped to surprise his wife with a night of passion — but thanks to his pharmacist's mistake he passed out instead.

The anxious hubby rushed home from the pharmacy with a prescription that was supposed to perk up his failing sex life. After taking the "love potion" the hubby fell asleep instead of rising to the occasion.

Dr. Alain Gregoire of King's Cross College Hospital, London, revealed in a letter to the British Medical Journal that the pharmacist had accidentally given the husband papaverrum, a sleeping drug, instead of papaverine, an impotency aid.

LOOKING FOR LOVE

Lonely man's 'female wanted' sign has 'em breaking down his doors

By JACK ALEXANDER

Divorced dad John Koehler was a lonely man looking for love until he stuck a sign in the back window of his van which said — "Wanted: Female."

Now he's swamped with letters and phone calls from lonely women who would like to get to know the curly-haired paperhanger from Spencerport, N.Y.

"The response has been unbelievable. I'm overwhelmed. I've had more than 100 letters and phone calls and they're still coming," he told The NEWS.

Koehler, 36, thought of the sign because he doesn't have time to look for dates. He's a single parent for a son, 18, and a daughter, 13.

"Between my work and coming home to take care of the kids, I don't have much time to look for female companionship," said Koehler, who doesn't smoke and enjoys an "occasional beer."

So the 5-foot-8, 150-pound eligible stuck the sign in the van, which says: "Female, 35-45. Must like children, camping, quiet times, pets. Hard working man. Lots of attention. Call. It don't hurt to talk (716) 352-1630."

"I'd drive real slow in case some lonely woman saw the sign in the rear window and wanted to pull up alongside and take a peek," Koehler told The NEWS.

He has found out there are a lot of single people "out there" who are not into the bar scene of singles clubs, and don't know how to make a connection with the opposite sex.

Koehler describes himself as a normal family-oriented man who likes to go camping outdoors and enjoys doing yard work.

And the "right woman" doesn't have to be beautiful, he adds.

"Lots of people go for the fancy wrapping and find out later there's no gift inside," he said.

In fact, the determined dad had to cut short his interview with The NEWS because he had to leave for a date with one of the women who saw his sign.

"She's 38 and works at a local plant," Koehler said.

"We're going to meet for coffee and just talk. I'm normally a shy, quiet guy. I'm really nervous about tonight," he said.

IT WORKS! John Koehler, above, says his bizarre sign has netted him over 100 letters and phone calls from lonely women.

First dinosaurs looked more like plucked chickens!

The earliest known dinosaurs to walk the Earth looked just like plucked chickens.

That's the mind-boggling finding of top scientist Paul Serano, who calls his 230-million-year-old discovery Herrerasaurus.

"Before, only a few bones of [illegible] were known," said Serano. "Now, we have everything."

Recent fossil discoveries show that the ferocious fowl is the most primitive dinosaur ever known to science. The 300-pound beast, [illegible] strange jaw, enormous claws and small forelimbs proving that it spent much of its time walking on its two legs, said Serano. And at approximately 70 pounds each, those prehistoric limbs would have made prize-winning drumsticks!

Two heads are better than one, say

THE INCREDIBLE STORY OF 2-HEADED MIRACLE

By BEATRICE DEXTER
in Dublin

Catherine-Ellish Hatton is a very special little girl — she has two heads!

The adorable year-old tot lives at home with her mother, Mary, and father Liam in a small town outside Dublin, Ireland.

Despite her tragic deformity, she is the most treasured of babies, the center of a loving family that includes sisters Claire, 6, Therese, 4, and Maidread, 3.

"All we want to do is to enjoy her," said the 28-year-old mom. "We have a very special love for her. We call one head Catherine and the other Ellish."

And each has its own personality, says mom

Mary and her husband first learned they were expecting a two-headed baby just one day before the child was delivered by caesarean section on Aug. 24, 1988. Mary admits that she hoped her little daughter would not survive.

"I thought, 'My God, how am I going to handle this?' " Mary recalled. "I was terrified.

"I prayed I'd never have to see her and that I'd never have to hold her in my arms. I prayed that if she were still alive, she'd die soon and I'd never have to face the problems I was horrified at what I was going to have to go through."

But after her daughter was delivered, Mary's feelings changed. The first sight of the tragic infant brought a wave of love and pity to both parents.

The little girl has two heads, two hands and arms, two hearts, two sets of lungs, two stomachs, and three kidneys.

Yet in spite of her massive physical problems, she is in excellent health — and may live a long life, doctors say.

"When I caressed the small heads for the first time, all my worries evaporated," recalled the girl's father, Liam, a salesman. "They were so adorable, there was nothing horrifying about them."

After a few months in the hospital, Catherine Eilish came home to live with her family and since then she's led a perfectly normal life. Her mother and sisters take her for walks in her small hometown, and everybody loves the little girl.

The child reflects this love in her happy, lively personality. And although she has only one body, each head has a different personality, says the mother.

"Eilish is more repressed than Catherine. She is impatient and doesn't talk much. Catherine is more talkative and excitable.

"Eilish eats and sleeps more than her sister," said the mother. "But it's obvious that she is a happy little girl. She's very special and she knows it."

Golfer, 74, gets hole-in-one twice

THROUGH blind, 74-year-old Margaret Waldron shot a hole-in-one at a Florida golf course — then scored another one the next day at the same hole!

By MARTHA ATKINS

A 74-year-old blind woman stunned her golfing partners when she scored a hole-in-one — twice!

Margaret Waldron of Amelia Island, Fla., was golfing with her husband, Pete, and another couple when she sank the ball on the seventh hole at Amelia Island Plantation's Long Point course. Then the very next day, she repeated her amazing shot on the same hole.

"It hasn't sunk in yet," said flabbergasted Margaret. "It was just unbelievable.

"I didn't see it, of course. But the woman I was playing with said, 'Oh, that's pretty! Ohh, it's in the cup!' I didn't believe her.

"Then the next day on the same hole I did it again. Everyone started jumping up and down and yelling that I'd gotten another one. I thought they were putting me on because I didn't see that one go in either."

— AND SHE'S BLIND!

Margaret's eyesight began to deteriorate about 10 years ago and now she has only peripheral vision. She can see only outlines and is legally blind.

"I can't read or drive a car. And when I play golf my husband tells me how far away the pin is and gives me direction.

"If I can't see it, he tells me to look for a certain tree behind the green.

"I'll aim myself, I'll look for something like a leaf or little twig and try to swing in that point, along that line," said the feisty senior.

Margaret plays 18 holes of golf three or four times a week, weather permitting.

"I've been playing for 31 years. My husband traveled during the week and then played golf all weekend so I took it up in self-defense," she chuckled.

The scored ball she sank her two aces with was one her husband had found.

"I'd been playing with it for a couple of weeks," said Margaret. "It was kind of beat up, but after I got the first one, I decided to use it again because it was lucky for me once.

"I've still got it but I won't play with it any more because it doesn't putt straight. But I'm definitely going to keep it."

Teen wins $2 million lottery in December — now he's broke!

It's less than four months since teenager Brett Peterson cashed the first $80,000 installment of his $2 million windfall — and he's just about flat broke!

By DICK DONOVAN

Last December, the free-spending 19-year-old college sophomore became the youngest winner of California's "Big Spin" Lottery, and he breezed through his big bucks like a hot knife through butter.

Today, he's looking for a job to tide him over until he receives his second $80,000.

"I really hadn't planned on going through it all without leaving myself some emergency money," Brett told The NEWS. "I decided I'd have a good time with the first installment . . . and I did. Next year I'll make some investments."

That first installment — $100,000 less $20,000 for Uncle Sam — went, as nearly as it came — on new sedans for his parents and a sleek sports car for himself, a $1,800 watch, loans to pals in need of a few thousand here and there, and to cover some hefty party tabs.

"I spent a lot of money just having fun," he explained. "On my school Christmas break, I shopped and partied almost non-stop. I'd go out with my pals and buy all the beer."

The fact is, Brett's down to his last $10,000. But $7,000 of that is earmarked for what he owes in additional taxes.

The day he hit the jackpot, he paid for airline tickets for his father and two of his friends to accompany him to Sacramento.

He paid for his sister Shannon, and a girlfriend to fly up and help him celebrate after the win.

He bought a pair of Nissin Maximas for his parents, plunking $22,500 down and financing the $22,000 balance. For himself, he forked out $22,000 for a Volkswagen Corrado.

Brett had a state-of-the art sound system and auto alarm installed and bought more than 80 compact discs. Then came a $3,500 computer and a lot of new duds.

"I definitely had a good time," said Brett. "Definitely! Now I have to go back to waiting on tables."

'Now I've got nothing to live for,' says Calif. quadriplegic

WIFE DUMPS CRIPPLED HUBBY — FOR HIS DOCTOR

By RICKY LAMB
Correspondent

Heartbroken cripple Henry Crommelin found a doctor to treat his paralysis — and lost his wife when she dumped him for his physician.

The Oakland, Calif., quadriplegic made such miraculous progress under treatment by Dr. James Fox that his pretty wife Marie began to worship the specialist as a genius. She became his lover and moved in with him, taking Crommelin's small son with her.

"I can't believe she just walked out on me," said Crommelin, 33. "She and the baby were all I had. Now I've got nothing to live for."

Crommelin was badly injured in a car wreck at the age of 27 and confined to a nursing home. Paralyzed from the neck down, he was unable to feed or care for himself.

While he was hospitalized he met and fell in love with brunette Marie, a nurse. To his delight and amazement, she agreed to become his wife, even though he was physically helpless.

The couple wed and moved into their own home in 1987. Marie cared for her husband devotedly and even made love to him. She became pregnant a year after they married and gave birth to a little boy, Scott, in 1988.

"When we saved up enough money, Marie found Dr. James Fox, a neurologist, and he began to treat me with surgery and physical therapy."

Incredibly, Dr. Fox's treatment brought results.

Within months, Crommelin began to have feeling in his arms and chest. He regained use of his arms and began to feed and dress himself.

By January 1990, Crommelin was taking his first halting steps — and losing his wife to the miracle doc.

"I could see that she admired him for what he had done for me," the tragic hubby recalled. "After a time, I began to see that she adored him, period.

"Soon she was making up excuses to be gone from the house in the evenings. I guess she was having an affair with him."

In March, Marie told her husband the marriage was over, took little Scott and moved in with her doctor lover. She filed for divorce and says she'll marry Dr. Fox when the divorce is final.

"Marie tells me I sure can get along on my own, but actually I'm worse off than I ever was," said Crommelin. "My body may be better, but my

- Cherokees have the highest median age, at 27.6 years.

Meteor man in hot water

Arizona businessman Robert Haag is called the Meteorite Man because he buys and sells meteorites — and that got him in trouble with Argentina.

Haag and two others were accused of trying to haul a 37-ton meteorite out of Argentina, where the sale of meteorites is illegal. "I've got my passport, and I'm out of here," said Haag, 38, whose trial was postponed for 90 days. He was allowed to return to Tucson until then to take care of his business.

Oops! I forgot!

"Help!" the man shrieked. "I've lost my memory!"

"Calm down, man. When did this happen?"

The man looked at him.

Mick Jagger is a BORE!

Rolling Stone is gathering moss, gripes Jerry Hall

Mighty [redacted] Jagger may have been the boozing, brawling bad boy of rock way back when — but live-in love Jerry Hall says old age has turned the former wreck-'n'-roller into a terrible bore!

"When I first started going out with Mick, I didn't smoke or drink and he was a party animal," recalled leggy Jerry, 35.

"Now I smoke and drink wine, but Mick doesn't drink, doesn't smoke and wants to go to bed early. I think it's a real bore.

"I'm a party girl — the first one to arrive and the last one to leave."

Mother Hen, 47, she has ordered the tall Texan to have dawn-to-dusk family dinners, won't allow him to lay on the street and to stop wearing fancy furs — so our ragged animal lovers will quit sending their nasty letters.

"I love furs and jewels, but Mick got me to quit wearing the furs," says Jerry, told a reporter. "You get hate mail for months after you wear them."

The '50s singing sensation, better of hits like Cry and Just Walking in the Rain, was a former boyfriend of gossip columnist Dorothy Kilgallen, who died in 1965 after downing a combination of booze and tranquilizers.

Dorothy's death came on the heels of a super-secret interview with Jack Ruby, the nightclub boss who killed Kennedy assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

Johnnie — and lots of other folks — figured the journalist was murdered because she knew who orchestrated the slaying of JFK. Her files on the Ruby interview were never found.

The prime suspect was Mafia kingpin who killed Miss Kilgallen. For years, he threatened to spill his autobiography and tell the whole sordid story.

"Johnnie believed Dorothy was murdered because of what she knew," said his publicist, Alan Eichler. "He also thought Marilyn Monroe was murdered.

Politician's sexist remark comes back to haunt him

Rapist quotes Texas candidate to victim: 'Relax and enjoy it!'

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A knife-wielding rapist used the joking words of a millionaire running for governor of Texas before he tied up his victim and assaulted her.

"Relax and enjoy it ... like Clayton Williams said, it's inevitable," the 30-year-old woman said she was told by the rapist.

The victim was bound and sexually assaulted by a man who broke into her apartment in Austin, Tex., and waited for her to return home from work.

Williams is a millionaire rancher who spent most of his own money to win the Republican nomination for governor of the Lone Star state.

He was widely criticized in the press a few weeks ago for comparing bad weather to rape. "If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it," he was quoted as saying.

"Mr. Williams had invited a group of reporters out to his ranch to watch the spring roundup," said one newsman. "We were lugged in one morning and that's when he joked about foul weather and rape."

But the remark caused such an outrage, he apologized.

"If anyone is offended, I apologize deeply," said Williams. He was not arrested in the rape case, according to Police Sgt. Kerlos Rawson.

SOUND OFF! Do you have something to say to Clayton Williams about his remark? Send it to Sound Off, Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462. We'll see that he gets it.

Dope surgically implanted in smuggler's legs

Suspicious U.S. customs agents searched a man who walked stiff-legged getting off a plane and found a pound of cocaine — surgically implanted inside his thighs.

"He should thank us for arresting him," said Manuel Pollack, district director of the U.S. Customs office in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

"Both of his legs were badly infected. Doctors said he could've died if they hadn't treated the infection when they did."

Customs agents noticed Robert O'Neill XI was walking stiff-legged when he stepped off an Iberia Air Lines flight from Bogota in San Juan. "He told us he was a diver and was going to Costa Rica, but his plane ticket showed his destination to be Madrid, Spain," said Director Pollack.

Later when O'Neill was strip-searched, agents found two quarter-pound kilo pouches of cocaine stitched inside of both thighs.

"He told us he had gone to a clinic in Bogota where doctors made incisions in his thighs, stuffed the coke in and stitched them up. The surgeon wouldn't say how much he was getting paid to deliver the cocaine or how long he had been carrying it around inside his legs.

Doctors speculated he'd been carrying the drugs around inside his thighs for at least two days based on the infection.

O'Neill was hospitalized under police guard in San Juan charged with drug smuggling. He was expected to be hospitalized at least five days.

Those wacky Romanians claim they invented baseball!

HOGWASH!

I'm madder than an umpire with busted bifocals at those pinhead Romanians who are claiming they invented the great American game of baseball.

Cristian Costescu, president of the new Romanian Baseball Federation, brags that our game is nothing more than the ancient game of oina and was taught to Americans by two Transylvanian immigrants who joined the U.S. Army in the 1850s.

Hogwash! Abner Doubleday invented baseball and I can tell you right now he was born in Ballston Spa, N.Y., not Dracula's hometown of Transylvania!

I almost died laughing when I read a description of this nit-wit Romanian game of oina. Listen to this, folks! The game has 11 men on one side. One team bats and the other fields.

Each side gets only one turn at bat in which ALL 11 players crowd around home plate at one time and the pitcher hurls the ball! The batters fight to get a hit — sometimes knocking each other out.

If someone is lucky enough to make contact with the ball, all 11 players take off and try to touch — get this — all nine bases! The fielders get the runners out by throwing the ball AT them and beaning them on the head!

Let's face it. It doesn't take a genius like the late great Yankee manager Casey Stengel to figure out that this ain't baseball, folks. This is lunacy!

Look, I'm all for Romanians insulting the great American pastime now that they've dumped their Communist bosses.

But when those vampire chasing gypsies say they invented baseball, that makes me pig-biting mad. It's theft — just pure and simple! But that's why they're such hate-mongers — last year alone nearly 12,000 bases were ripped off the cemetery's ballfields and sold on the black market!

I want those strike Romanos is OUT!

THE original Brooklyn Dodgers of 1955. You think they played some dumb Romanian game? Not on your life!

Cancer rate up for pot smokers

A surgeon has found a common link between a number of young, otherwise healthy people who have developed cancerous tumors of the mouth and neck — they all smoked marijuana!

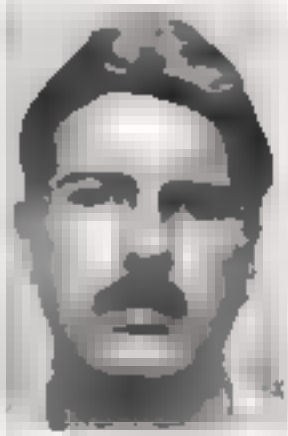
"This was a rather shocking finding," declared Dr. Paul Donald, a head and neck surgeon at the University of California at Davis, who observed the link in nine of his patients.

Among these patients was a man with with a tumor bulging from his mouth down to his chin, a woman with a tumor under her tongue, and a man with a huge mass on his neck.

The severity of the fast-growing cancers are what Dr. Donald normally sees in people in their 50s who had been heavy smokers or drinkers for decades.

The patients he treated had an average age of 27 and all had smoked marijuana during high school or college, or during duty in Vietnam. Some had smoked as few as two or three marijuana cigarettes a week, others as many as six or eight a day.

Accused rapist set free — & rapes little girl, cops say



A man accused of raping a 7-year-old girl and her baby-sitter while awaiting trial on another rape charge has been released from jail again.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A judge set bail at $50,000 for John Earley, 27, despite the objections of prosecutors and the mother of the 7-year-old victim.

"That man shattered my daughter's life," said the outraged mother of the 7-year-old. She believes the suspect is a menace. "I just hope he doesn't do the same thing to someone else's child."

Earley was first jailed in January 1980, accused of raping a woman in the walled home from a West Palm Beach, Fla., bar.

Four months after he was released on $5,000 bail awaiting trial on the rape charge, Earley allegedly broke into the home of the 7-year-old and her baby-sitter.

Earley forced his way into the baby-sitter's car, drove to a secluded area and raped them after locking the little girl's 8-year-old brother in the car, cops said.

The little girl, her brother and the baby-sitter identified Earley from photos as the rapist, according to police.

But friends of the accused rapist told Judge Tom Johnson that Earley was with them at a dog track and a Lake Worth bar the night of the alleged attack.

Earley's friends raised $5,000 and two days later Earley's friends raised bail out of the jail.

"He's a free man until his trial," said a police spokesman. "I personally think he's a menace to society. Three people have already said he raped them and yet he's allowed to walk the streets."

A married health contractor said Earley told her he was John the Baptist, according to court records.

The woman raped in West Palm Beach said Earley told her the same thing before he assaulted and spanked her, cops said.

Co-workers also said Earley told them he takes orders from "the spirit of the Lord God Almighty."

Monster dad who torched his son is living like a king!

CHILD-BURNER Rothenberg

The fiendish father who set fire to his son and scarred him forever is being treated like some kind of big shot since his parole and it's costing taxpayers $18,000 a month — or a whopping $216,000 a year!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Charles Rothenberg is chauffeured around by parole officers, who take him on out-of-town trips, pick up his grocery tab and even bring him the morning newspaper.

"I can do pretty much what I want," said Rothenberg, 49, during a phone call from Oakland. Calif. He added that he'd been to "some really nice places."

Rothenberg turned his then 6-year-old son into a human inferno in 1965 in a twisted plot to hurt the wife who divorced him. The fire left young David Rothenberg horribly disfigured, with third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body.

The monster did not hurt his little boy after his ex-wife threatened to withhold visitation rights. He was paroled from prison after serving less than six years for the horrible crime.

Rothenberg's whereabouts were unknown until he called a California newspaper recently to say he was living in Oakland, wearing an electronic surveillance anklet and guarded around the clock by parole agents.

The agents drive the ex-con wherever he wants to go — shopping for groceries, a stroll around town or to out-of-town restaurants.

Parole officers [illegible] his servants — they:

- Chauffeur him around
- Take him to restaurants
- Bring him his newspaper
- Buy his groceries

. . . and it costs taxpayers a whopping $216,000 a year!

He has found an "really good place in Berkeley."

Rothenberg works part-time but he wouldn't say what he does. Whatever he makes is turned over to the state, but it doesn't begin to cover the $18,000 in monthly expenses — mostly for parole officers' salaries.

Despite his parole officer's restrictions, Rothenberg said he's lonely. He watches TV but doesn't like newspapers. "Because I don't like to read about the violence."

But his horribly disfigured son still fears his dad will hurt him again. David, now 13, lives here with 400 miles away from his father in Buena Park, Calif.

The youngster lives with his mother and stepfather. Police don't care where he (Rothenberg) is or how he is," said Kimball. "He's not a part of our lives anymore."

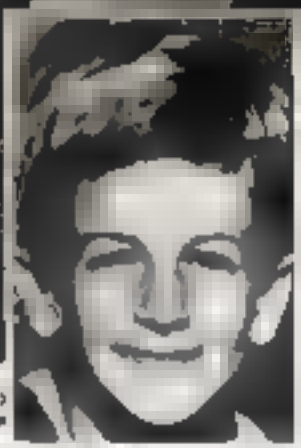
Because of public anger over Rothenberg's gruesome crime, state prison officials felt it necessary to put him under tight security after his parole.

"I know it's difficult for the public to understand why we're paying his expenses and guarding him so closely," said a California department of corrections spokesman.

Having no kin would hurt Rothenberg just fine.

But what really bothers Rothenberg is that his scarred-for-life son calls him Charles instead of Dad.

"When David looks in the mirror or gets harassed, he thinks of me as the perpetrator



HANDSOME David Rothenberg, left, was only 6 when his fiendish father turned him into a human torch and left him scarred for life, above.

What do YOU think about the duty life we taxpayers are providing for child-burner Charles Rothenberg? Weekly World News readers sent thousands of angry letters protesting Rothenberg's release from prison in January — now this! Tell us what you think, and we'll send your thoughts to the governor of California. Mail to "You Be the Judge," Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Bounty offered for farm wives

How do you keep 'em down on the farm after they've seen Seoul?

South Korean officials are playing cupid for lonely farmers in need of a mate — they're offering a reward for women willing to become farm wives!

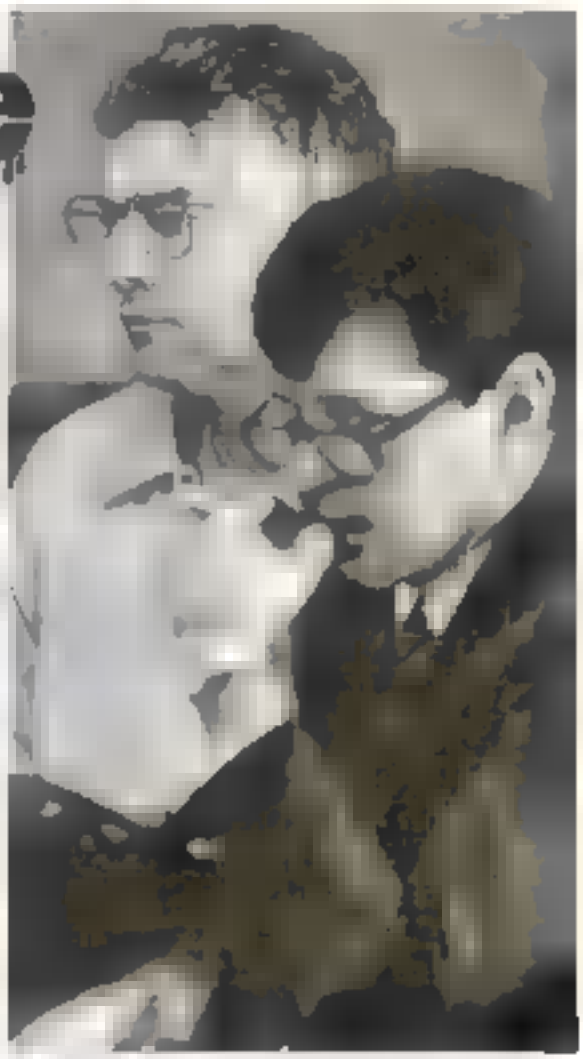
Family's storybook life has horror movie ending

FACE OF EVIL: Couple lived a fairy-tale life in the suburbs



IMPACT: Dr. John Boyle was attorney.

By MARTHA ATKINS
Staff writer

Neighbors thought John and Noreen Boyle were the perfect couple — until cops found her dead body and charged her doctor husband with murder!

Cops say rich doctor killed wife and buried her in the basement!

The couple, who were childhood sweethearts, appeared to have everything going for them. John, 46, was a prominent osteopath, and Noreen, 44, was the perfect wife and mother to their children — Caitlin, 11, and Elizabeth, 8.

They had a dog, lived in a big Cape Cod home called "Quiet Cottage" and had a vacation house on an island. But with Noreen's death, the startling truth about the Boyles' seemingly storybook life was exposed and it left their pals in Mansfield, Ohio, neighborhood reeling in shock.

Much of what they'd told friends about their wealthy backgrounds was nothing but a pack of lies. Noreen wasn't the pampered daughter of a blue-blood Philadelphia family and John's exploits as the flight surgeon for the Navy Blue Angels were false.

They were really just two ordinary people who made up an elaborate fantasy to cover up their middle-class background — for what reason nobody knows.

"I don't know why they'd make up such a story," said their next-door neighbor Gene Hart. "We were shocked when we found out but we were fascinated because it was just so wild.

"Everyone thought they were a very close, loving family. We'd family they appeared to be."

Hart, who's a private investigator, revealed he knew Dr. Boyle was seeing other women on the side and even had once tried to hire him to find a former girlfriend who left town to get away from him.

"Then last fall Noreen came over to the house and told my wife she'd had it with John and was going to start divorce proceedings," Hart said. "She was afraid John would try to get custody of the children because he was a doctor and she wasn't working."

But poor Noreen never got the chance to divorce her lying, cheating husband. She disappeared from her home on the early morning hours of Dec. 31, only one week after — and again with police.

The morning after Noreen disappeared, authorities began investigations after receiving phone calls from concerned friends and relatives.

According to information obtained from Noreen Boyle's friends, John Boyle was a suspect," said Lt. David Simmons of the Mansfield Police Department.

He learned Boyle had been planning to move to Erie, Pa., and had recently bought a $300,000 home there. During his investigation, Lt. Simmons found out Boyle had received a [illegible] and bought some [illegible]

Surefire tips for a super marriage

Men are more satisfied with their marriages than women . . . Marriages fare better when neither spouse is overweight . . . Happy couples watch less television and live far from relatives.

By KATHY GAMMON

These are just bits of the eye-opening facts about marital happiness uncovered in a fascinating study done by experts.

Sociologist Dr. Jackson Nolan and psychiatrist Dr. Sam Jason asked 100 married men and women dozens of questions to determine what makes marriages tick.

And what they found when they studied the answers to those questions may surprise you.

"Our data confirms our suspicions that many of the things we have long assumed to be true about the happily married are not really important while other factors which have been neglected do count a lot," Dr. Jason declared.

For instance these couples who rated their marriages happiest lived the enough alone from in-laws that relatives couldn't drop in unannounced.

In 91 percent of the most happy marriages, the wife's parents lived within 10 miles.

And asked to rate their marriages, men rated the wedded state higher on the average than did women.

Unhappily married couples drank almost twice as much coffee and smoke nearly twice than those who say they are happily married.

Couples who are health-conscious tend to be the most happily married. When both partners are normal weight, their chances for happiness are greatly increased. Both husbands and wives who take daily vitamins are 2½ times more likely to say they are happily married.

In the happiest marriages, both husbands and wives tend to be neat. In "odd couple" marriages, chances for happiness are higher if the wife is the neat partner.

The happily married go out together more frequently and like to visit friends.

The less happily married go out less frequently and prefer the movies.

And when they are at home the happily married make lovemaking and talking to each other at their favorite activities — while the less happily married spend more time watching TV.

Some of the more offbeat findings of the study include: marriages are happier where the husband shovels rather than bathes; the most happily married couples have the same eye color and those married in October were most likely to be unhappy.

I shed buckets of tears 'cause I'm a tub of lard

Dear Dotti: I'm 65 pounds overweight and can't shed a pound no matter how hard I try. I feel so fat [illegible] sometimes I just break down and cry. I don't want to go on living this way, Dotti. Please help me if you know of ANYTHING I can do. — Depressed in Emporia

Dear Depressed: Being fat isn't the end of the world and it's certainly not something to commit suicide over. See a doctor and explain your situation to him. If nothing else, he can wire your mouth shut!

How can you tell who's a hooker?

Dear Dotti: What's the difference between a street-corner hooker and a girl who rewards her dates with sex after a dinner and movie? — Needs to Know in Salt Lake City

Dear Needs: About $100 an hour!

My lazy son won't move out

Dear Dotti: My 27-year-old son still lives at home with his father and me and he's making our lives a living hell. He refuses to get a job or help with chores around the house and spends hours on end in his bedroom just watching dirty shows on TV. Whenever I talk to him about moving out he tells me he's not leaving because he's got it too good at home. I've asked my husband to talk to the boy but he won't do it. Please help me, Dotti. How can I get my son to strike out on his own? — Fed Up to Overexpert

Dear Fed Up: Tell your son [illegible] good one to pack his bags and get out. It's as simple as that!

Dear Lonesome Lady in Sparta: The head of a pig in a blanket? But this is ridiculous!

Dear Bewildered in Atlanta: Are you sure why you should ALWAYS wear rubber underwear?

Am I gay if I love another guy?

Dear Dotti: I'm a 16-year-old boy in love with a 16-year-old boy. Does that mean I'm gay? Should I tell my parents? — Worried in Kansas City

Dear Worried: Yes to the first question. No to the second — unless you're stupid.

Tell me who I should marry

Dear Dotti: I'm thinking about marrying one of two men in my life and want you to tell me which one would be the most faithful. The one who's been with many, many women or the man who's been with only me. — Curious to Ask Love

Dear Curious: Don't be a pea-brain! If you can't instinctively point your question, you have no business getting married!

How can I better my boss?

Dear Dotti: In a few weeks we'll be evaluated for merit raises at work and I'm desperate to get a big one. I'm a good worker and I rarely get sick but that might not be enough. Any ideas on how I can get an edge with my boss? — Desperate in Boston

Dear Desperate: Go in the boss' office and tell him what kind of raise you want and why you deserve it. He'll appreciate your honesty and straightforwardness — I guarantee it!

I need a date for the big dance

Dear Dotti: I think this guy in my high school likes me a lot but he's too shy to say or ask me out. There's a big dance coming up and I'd really like to go with him. So how can I get him to everyone his shyness and ask me to be his date? — Dreaming in L.A.

Dear Dreaming: Ask the boy yourself! The worst he can do is tell you to get lost!

Other folks make you fat!

By ELLIOT FOSTER

The people you see every day can make you fat!

A man who doesn't appreciate hard work . . . a husband who doesn't compliment his wife . . . an individual who constantly upsets others — they can all be responsible for causing folks to pile on unwanted pounds.

"Many people overeat because they are frustrated by the people around them. Over the years I've treated literally hundreds of people with this problem," declared Lee Handley, a psychotherapist who has worked with overeaters for more than 15 years.

"People who are frustrated in personal relationships and don't know how to cope with them tend to distract themselves by finding something else to worry about," explained Handley, a licensed clinical social worker.

"One of the commonest ways is by getting overweight. Then they spend all their time talking about the overweight as the problem, rather than the more interpersonal difficulties.

"There's no doubt that people you see every day can make you fat."

Handley recalled the case of a 38-year-old engineer who was 80 pounds overweight because he let his bosses take advantage of him, by working him overtime, passing him over for promotions, etc.

"Rather than putting his foot down, he expressed his anger by eating.

"He'd have four ice-cream sodas at a time.

"I encouraged him to stand up to his employer, and he finally got up enough guts to say, 'Look, either you promote me and knock off that stuff or I quit!'"

The boss backed down, the engineer got promoted, his self-esteem went up and he immediately began to lose his excess weight, Handley said. "He's even given up ice-cream sodas."

Couple loses $35,000 life savings playing video poker

— then sues bar to get it back!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A distraught couple said they worked their entire lives to save $35,000 and lost it all — playing video poker in a neighborhood bar!

Robert and Doris Gustavo have filed a lawsuit against Steven Wright, owner of the Oxbow Lake Road House in Oxbow Lake, Mich.

The couple claim Wright hooked them on the video poker machines by offering free drinks and encouraging them to play.

Wright and other bar employees told the couple of big video poker wins by other customers that the Gustavos later discovered weren't true, the suit contends.

Police and State Liquor Control Commission investigators raided the bar last month and seized two video poker machines that allegedly had been part of an illegal gambling operation for more than a year. Several regular customers got addicted to gambling with the machines and lost thousands of dollars, cops said. One woman lost her home.

Neither the Gustavos nor Wright would talk to the press.

The Gustavos lost over $35,000 life savings within three years, according Gustavo played cards at the bar to the suit. They want that money returned, plus $50,000 in damages. Wright took over the bar in the spring of 1987 and installed the poker machines the suit says. Prior to that, the

How you sit reveals your personality

The way you sit in your chair reveals your personality, say two experts.

"When people sit down, they exhibit vital clues as to what they're really like," says sociologist Dr. Jackie Bales.

Here, she and psychologist Dr. Herbert Zand explain several sitting positions for personality clues.

● "Edge of the chair" sitters are alert, spontaneous and eager to express their thoughts, ideas and feelings.

● "Slumpers" are informal and so self-confident that they're totally comfortable in most social situations.

● "Spreaders" are individualistic and live according to their own set of rules. They're proud of their success.

● "Leg huggers," who curl into tight balls, hugging their legs, are reserved and self-controlled.

They act on intuition rather than logic.

● "Straight backs" sitters are determined and persistent. They are willing to sacrifice in order to achieve their [illegible] and they consider maintaining appearances very important.

● A "leg crosser" is cautious, refined, secretive and careful to say exactly the right thing at the right time.

● "Both-feet-on-the-ground" sitters are independent, practical and well-organized.

● The "chair straddler," who sits facing the back of a chair as if astride a horse, is forceful and domineering.

● The "leg bouncer," who constantly moves one leg while sitting, is a striver who's always working on a project and is impatient when things don't move along quickly.

Nutty squirrel attacks trucker

Truck driver Ivor Hall landed in a hospital after a mad-as-a-hatter squirrel leaped into his truck, skittered up his leg — and bit the devil out of him!

"It attached itself to my chest, looked me dead in the eye, then started clawing my back and neck and pulling my hair," 56-year-old Ivan said.

"It must have thought I was a tree," added Ivan from his hospital bed in Bournemouth, England.

A police spokesman warned that while squirrels may look sweet and cuddly, they can be dangerous.

"They are rodents and if they don't get their own they can be vicious."

Jury's verdict brings living nightmare to a halt!

By SUSAN JIMISON
Staff Writer

A powerful psychic "vision" led Julie Bowers to the body of her murdered baby — and plunged her into a living nightmare when cops arrested her for the killing!

Now, two years after her ordeal began, the young Toronto, Canada, woman has been acquitted by a jury and has gone home free to the welcoming arms of her husband and her surviving son Ben, 5.

"I've come this far in the past two years and all I know is I've been asleep all since the day it happened," the 28-year-old mom said. "I'm going to try and get on with my life with my husband and my son."

Julie, a 5-year-old ex-Danish sharpshooter, left 14-month-old Dustin sleeping in his crib while she took her older boy into a bath. He had been asleep and she didn't want to wake him, she said.

But when she returned to the car a few minutes later, the baby was gone, she told authorities. The blue-eyed brown-haired tot had been snatched from his car seat, she claimed, while she was in the bathroom.

Searchers combed the small town of Kincardine near Georgian Springs, the resort where she and her husband had come up with no trace of the child. Then anguished Julie Bowers had a dream in which she "saw" her little boy lying on a riverbank surrounded by trees. She reported her strange vision to police.

"She said, 'If I saw the place, I think I would recognize the place,'" said Constable David Quinn of the Kincardine Police, who helped Julie search for her baby. "She felt that she could point out the area in her dream."

Constable Quinn drove the distraught young mom in a police vehicle, following her directions. As she neared one part of town she went wild.

"She was into a kind of low moan and whining sound and her movements were becoming quite active," Quinn said. "She was rolling in her seat. She was throwing her head and top of her body back and forth in her seat to the point I was concerned for her safety."

Constable Quinn stopped the car and got out with Julie, who paced up and down the snow-covered road.

"She shouted, 'Back there,'" Constable Quinn said. "She started to holler very loud now. 'It's here! It's here!' She said, 'There it is! I see something blue. My baby, my baby! I've got to get it!'" Sure enough baby Dustin was lying in the snow in his blue snowsuit, frozen to death. Police detectives began to suspect that Dustin's mother had had a hand in his death. Julie was arrested and charged with second-degree murder.

But after a headline-grabbing trial, Julie was acquitted.

"The last two years have been hell," said the smiling brunette outside the courthouse after the verdict was announced. "I am thankful to be going home at last."

When it came to rating their love life, 29.5 percent of the gals said it was great, while only 7 percent said it was "lousy — my neighbor's dog has more dates."

You can freeze to death even in summer!

It's a gentle killer, mentally lulling you to sleep before snuffing out your life. It's an elusive killer, often mistaken for something else.

By DARLA Simonetti

It's hypothermia — a dangerous loss of body heat — and it claims thousands of Americans every year — even in the summer!

"Hypothermia comes to just about us all people," said Dr. John Stitt.

You don't have to be out in the snow to get hypothermia. Victims of hypothermia usually don't recognize the symptoms he said.

As the body's temperature lowers, "victims simply become sleepy and slip into unconsciousness."

A lot of elderly people who are found dead in their beds are frequently misdiagnosed as having had a fatal heart attack when, in fact, hypothermia was the real culprit. The elderly are particularly susceptible and should never permit temperatures inside their homes to drop below 65 degrees. Don't crank up the air conditioning too high. And be extra careful when vacationing in the mountains.

"Hypothermia is more of a problem when people are sleeping," said Dr. Stitt. "Elderly people who are told lose a lot of heat from their heads. Wear a cap for sleeping."

The experts offered these additional tips:

- Avoid alcohol when you're cold. "Alcohol might make you feel warmer, but ultimately it cools down your whole body," said Dr. Stitt.
- Remember that food is what your body uses to produce heat. A diet high in carbohydrates is especially good against cold. So be sure to eat.
- Carry a "survival kit" of carbohydrate snacks, warm clothing and fire-making implements in your car if you're going to drive in a remote area.
- Pay attention not only to the temperature outside — but also the windchill factor.

A 15-mile-per-hour wind can make a 25-degree temperature the equivalent of 10 degrees.

- Keep your clothes dry when you're out in the cold. "In nearly every fatality I've heard about from outside exposure, the subjects got wet," said Dr. Stitt.

Gals want it all

Most women want a career, marriage AND family, according to a new poll just released by Self magazine.

The role of a working, married mother is most satisfying to 89 percent of the women polled between the ages of 18 and 49.

Only 7 percent wished to return to the good old days of their mother's stay-at-home generation.

[redacted] mom's heartbreak:

All my kids are dying of AIDS!

TRAGEDY: Judy Smith says, "I don't know what I ever did to deserve such misfortune like this."

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Heartbroken Judy Smith has seven grown children, but she's not going to have them long — because every one of them is dying of AIDS!

Incredibly, the Nebraska housewife — whose name has been changed to protect her children — has two sons in the advanced stages of the killer disease and two sons and three daughters who have tested positive for the HIV virus.

Every single one of them caught the deadly disease through blood transfusions before testing for AIDS in the blood supply began six years ago.

"I don't know what I ever did to deserve a terrible punishment like this," said Mrs. Smith, 54, in an emotion-filled interview. "I'm going to lose every one of the children I have within the next few years.

"My sons are all homosexuals so we knew there was a risk for them. But my three daughters got the virus after undergoing blood surgery and didn't find out about it until last fall."

The anguished mother says her children — ranging in age from 18 to 31 — are still able to work and care for their families. But as their disease gets worse, she will become their primary caregiver," she said. "I don't know how my sons and daughters-in-law are going to manage, even with my help.

"When the first one got sick, I swore I'd be brave. But as one after another of my kids fell sick, I just got beaten down. I'm scared — I just don't think I can handle this."

Since the first son got sick in 1979, there's been nothing but heartbreak for Judy Smith. Her devilish litter, a second son was diagnosed with the AIDS virus and by 1982 all four of Mrs. Smith's sons carried the virus.

But no one thought the woman's daughters were in danger because none of them had the bleeders disease, hemophilia. Then, last September Mrs. Smith's worst fears were realized when tests showed the girls had it too!

"One daughter got sick while giving birth to her baby in 1981," Mrs. Smith said. "And doctors think another daughter contracted AIDS when she had surgery to remove a bone tumor. The third one probably got it when she had transfusions during plastic surgery in 1984."

The brave mom says she tries not to be bitter about her bad luck, but it's hard to face the thought that she'll be alone in the world in just a few years.

"I did everything I could to love my kids and care for them," the grieving mom said tearfully. "But not one will be alive to keep me company when I'm old."

Two bananas a day will keep heart attack away, says doc

By MARTHA ATKINS

Eating two bananas a day can lower your risk of having a heart attack, says a top doc.

The average American eats only about 50 bananas a year but Dr. Lewis Tobian, a professor of medicine at the University of Minnesota, gobbles down a whopping 730, which is about two a day.

that can lead to strokes and heart attacks because it's extremely rich in potassium. Dr Tobian, who's an authority on potassium and health, conducted a series of experiments and studies on rats and people and found that a high potassium intake protects against cholesterol buildup and keeps the arteries clear.

While the doctor highly recommends bananas, which contain about 400 milligrams of potassium each, he's quick to point out bananaist aren't the only source of potassium. You can also provide a high intake of the mineral. Other foods that are also high in potassium are apricots, avocados, potatoes, spinach, lima beans, yogurt, dates, orange or grapefruit juice, tomatoes, Brussels sprouts, skim milk, carrots, chicken and salmon.

In addition to his two bananas a day, Dr Tobian's diet also includes a 12-ounce glass of grapefruit juice, a half grapefruit, often a potato and "a low fat, low salt food, lots [illegible]

A would-be rapist froze in his tracks after escaping from a maiming mob only to come face-to-face with an even more hostile foe — a giant hissing lizard!

The 10-foot-long monitor lizard cornered Salah Mbuguss and cut off his escape route after he crossed a narrow river to flee from a hoping-mad crowd armed with rocks, sticks and machetes.

"He took off like a bat out of hell," said Najeem Githui, one of the men who chased Mbuguss. "He was way ahead of us and then disappeared down the bank of a narrow river.

"We thought we'd lost him forever but when we got to the top of the riverbank he was on the other side shaking in his shoes. His eyes were bugging out in fear of that huge lizard."

The incident began when Mbuguss pounced on 36-year-old Mary Kipsal and started to rip her clothes off as she was planting a vegetable garden near her home in Nakuru, Kenya.

When she began screaming hysterically, she alerted a bunch of nearby workmen.

As the hostile pause of outraged men advanced, the would-be fiend took flight before he could complete his dastardly deed, but he ran into more trouble than he had gained for.

"That lizard was the ugliest thing I've ever seen," said Githui.

"Its body was all puffed up and it was hissing up a storm with its long tongue flicking in and out.

"We'd look at the lizard and then he'd glance back up the bank at us.

"We told him he'd better take his chances with us instead of the lizard because he stood a better chance of living."

Apparently deciding that the howling mob was the lesser of two evils, Mbuguss crossed back over the river and gave himself up to the crowd, which then beat him to within an inch of his life before dragging him off to the nearest police station.

He probably made the right decision, too, because monitor lizards are among the largest reptiles in the world. The brownish or greenish-gray lizards can measure 8 feet and even more. And there have been reports of them attacking men and also of killing and eating small children.

After her horrible ordeal, grateful Mary thanked her rescuers for saving her from the fiend.

"I just thank God there were other people working nearby to save me from that monster," said Mary. "He got just what he deserved. I wouldn't have cared if they'd beaten him to death or let the lizard have him.

"He was always hanging around and bothering me but I never thought he'd actually attack me."

MUMMY monitor lizards can overpower a human being.

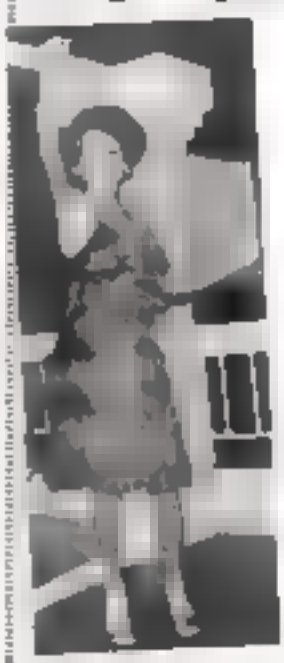
Ticked-off Texan, 41, sues nightclub for $50G

My boss said I'm too OLD to dance topless



LEGGY Ann Marie shows off her stuff on the dance floor.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Curvy mom Ann Marie Lindsey is suing a topless nightclub, claiming they wouldn't let her dance — because she was too old.

"It's not too pleasant to be told you're over the hill at age 41," explained the blonde-haired cutie. Ann Marie said she had no trouble getting hired at another topless nitery.

Ann Marie, who uses the stage name "Amy," asked the manager of the Cabaret Royale in Dallas, Tex., a year ago if she could be promoted from waitress to dancer, according to the suit.

"One of the managers, Bryan Pool, told me, 'Amy, you are too old,'" Ann Marie told The NEWS.

The director of Cabaret Royale, Diane Tatum, denied any one there told Ann Marie she was too old to be a dancer.

"We have a mother-and-daughter team dancing right now," she said. "The mother is 48 or 49. She's a very elegant lovely lady and doing very well here.

"We didn't want her to dance because she was a problem," said Diane Tatum. "She wasn't really Cabaret material. She's pretty heavy and she even told some customers off."

Ann Marie quit her job as head waitress at the Cabaret Royale two months later and got a job as a topless dancer at the Million Dollar Saloon.

"All I can tell you is, for her age — and she's older than most girls who work here — the girl can stand up against those 25 and 26 year olds," said general manager Kenny Jared.

The lawsuit contends Ann Marie was entirely qualified for the position she sought as a dancer at the Cabaret Royale. After the managers there rejected her as a dancer, the nightclub continued to seek applicants who shared Ann Marie's qualifications but were younger than 40, her suit claims. Ann Marie is seeking $50,000 in damages.

DANCER Ann Marie Lindsey didn't like hearing she was "too old." So she quit — and got a job at another topless club.

How to beat the blues

The good news is that missing a night's sleep can cure depression. The bad news is that it will return as soon as you get some sleep. But don't give up — there's more good news!

Knowing now that missing sleep has cured depression in 30 percent of patients is leading researchers to hunt for a biochemical substance released during sleep that may bring on the deep blues.

The possible link between sleep and depression was found in a review of 61 studies involving 2,700 patients over the past 21 years.

The review, published in a recent issue of The American Journal of Psychiatry, was done by Dr Joseph C. Wu and Dr William B. Bunney, at the University at California at Irvine.

U.S. owes $105.3 billion from 1777 loan

An ancestor of a man who loaned George Washington money to help win the Revolutionary War is trying to get the debt repaid — and with interest, the bill comes to a whopping $105.3 billion!

money, I would be expected to pay the principal, interest and any penalties that might have been incurred," says Carolyn Culbertson of San Antonio, Tex.

She is one of about 2,000 living descendants of Jacob DeHaven, the man who lent Washington $450,000 in 1777.

When the war ended, the U.S. government offered the repay the loan in continentals, the new country's then-worthless currency. Jacob DeHaven turned it down Dish up family fun with 'happy foods'!

You can perk up your family at the dinner table and promote togetherness and harmony by serving "happy foods," experts say.

"Some foods are 'happier' than others," explains psychologist Dr Herbert Hoffman. "There are foods that help lift your spirits and others that have the opposite effect."

Happy foods include ice cream, cheeseburgers, fried chicken, spaghetti and pizza. Unhappy foods include black olives, liver, mustard greens, spinach and pea soup.

"Ice cream is a happy food because it means 'party,'" said Dr Hoffman. "Cheeseburgers are happy because they're easy to eat and you can hold them in your hand. Foods that can be eaten with the fingers usually lead to an informal and casual atmosphere.

"Spaghetti and pizza are happy because they are served from a large dish from which each person takes his share. Spaghetti and pizza are foods that give a family a sense of unity."

By PAM VOLZ

Liver, mustard greens, pea soup and black olives rank high on the list of unhappy foods. One reason liver is unhappy is because it carries a "good for you" image people tend to resent, Dr. Hoffman said. Spinach is unhappy for the same reason.

Mustard greens are unhappy because they're soggy and have a gloomy, dark color. Pea soup is unhappy because of its dull color. And black olives are depressing because "black is historical to implosion," Dr. Hoffman said.

Sociologist Dr Jacob Reiss says: "I've found that serving happy foods at the dinner table can make a big difference in the way a family gets along."

She offered these tips for making evening meals a more exhilarating experience.

"Serve red foods whenever you can.

"Serve whole loaves of bread, rather than pre-sliced. It's an easy way to establish an informal, congenial environment."

Greedy landlord choked to death – on wad of money!

THE body of slumlord Walter Kimberly was found in an alley behind a saloon — with $200 stuffed down his throat.

By RICK TRACY
Penny Intelligencer

Cops are trying to solve the baffling mystery of a skinflint slumlord who was choked to death — on a wad of money!

The body of Walter Kimberly was found in an alley on the outskirts of Paris, France.

A police photograph clearly shows that a wad of money had been crammed down his throat.

An autopsy showed he suffocated. Money clogged his windpipe and cut off his supply of air.

"There is no shortage of suspects in this case," said Police Inspector Georges Pierrot. "Everybody hated the guy. He was a heartless old lightweight."

Kimberly, 65, was a shrewd Yankee trader who had gotten rich off the misery of others. He had amassed a fortune by charging excessive rent for tiny shacks — many of which had dirt floors.

"We also have found out he loaned money to people who couldn't borrow it from banks or other institutions and charged a high interest rate," said Inspector Pierrot.

Kimberly's fat body was found next to a garbage can behind a saloon. "About $200 in French banknotes had been stuffed down his throat," said Inspector Pierrot. "His empty wallet lay nearby.

"We believe the killer is someone with a vendetta of some sort against the old man, possibly one of his tenants or someone else who had borrowed money from him," said the inspector.

"It is very, very possible one of his poor tenants paid his rent by shoving the cash into Kimberly's mouth. And Kimberly paid with his life," said Inspector Pierrot.

Thousands of the greedy old slumlord's victims could be suspects.

And all experienced firsthand exactly how he made his money grow.

9 in 10 have been hypnotized by driving!

Here's how to avoid it

You're behind the wheel at a red light and you can't even remember braking your car to a stop. Your mind seems to have shut down for the past few minutes.

You are a victim of highway hypnosis. Incredibly, you're both driving in a trance.

It's a potentially deadly situation — but you can avoid becoming a victim.

By PAM VOLZ

"At least 90 percent of motorists have driven their cars while in a hypnotic trance, sometime in their life," says Dr Robert Thiel.

Highway hypnosis is "extremely dangerous" and sometimes fatal, says highway safety expert Charles Spaidner.

"Although we do not know exactly how many highway deaths are caused by highway hypnosis, we do know that there are far more than are reported to the authorities."

Here are the symptoms of highway hypnosis: Your eyelids feel heavy, arms and legs feel wooden. Time is distorted, seemingly moving faster or slower than usual. Your mind may blank out or be totally absorbed in some fantasy. You may stop at a red light without even being fully aware that you are braking the car.

You may temporarily lose the fast reflexes needed to brake suddenly or to steer around something. You find yourself staring at a sign or light longer than you normally would.

You may experience a temporary loss of awareness of your body. For example, you may not feel the heat or cold.

If you have experienced more than half of these symptoms at any one time, you were suffering from highway hypnosis, experts say.

To prevent it, they advise, never drive when drowsy or under the influence of alcohol or drugs. If you find yourself drifting off as you drive, open a window, pinch yourself or stop the car and take a short walk or do some stretching.

In addition, avoid listening to music that's overly relaxing or anything while you drive, and don't gaze too intently at lights, poles or the highway centerline.

Sweet dressing

Doctors have revived a 4,000-year-old Egyptian treatment for healing infected wounds — they pack the wounds with sugar.

Experts say the treatment probably works because sugar tends to draw water into its gritty midst through osmosis.

This action dries the bed of the wound to promote new tissue growth and dehydrates the bacteria that cause infection.

Dr Richard Knutsen, an orthopedic surgeon in Greenville, Miss., is credited with reviving the ancient technique.

HEART ATTACK SCARE FOR HULK HOGAN

HULK Hogan's personal doctor has warned him to take a break from wrestling.

by BERNIE BASHER
Wrestling Reporter

Hulk Hogan suffered what he first feared was a serious heart attack during a match just two weeks before he lost his world championship to The Ultimate Warrior at WrestleMania!

The incident occurred in Tampa on March 18, when Hogan and his tag-team partner, The Big Boss Man, beat Mr. Perfect and The Genius. As the Hulkster came off the ropes to deliver a final bone-crunching logdrop on The Genius, he felt a tightening in his chest.

"Hulk was sure that his heart was going," a fellow wrestler explained. "But being the true professional that he is, he finished the match."

Later, in the dressing room, Hogan complained that his heart was racing and he was examined by the attending physician. The doctor told the 30-year-old champ that he had experienced arrhythmia — a slight irregularity of his heartbeat.

The next day, Hogan, a native of Tampa, got a second opinion from his personal physician, who urged him to take at least a six-month vacation from wrestling. But Hulk's uncle, who is managing their second child soon, also pleased with him to take a little time off.

But the Hulkster repeatedly replied, "I won't do that. All my fans are counting on me to destroy The Warrior and prove that Hulkamania is the strongest force in the universe. I can't let them down."

The shocking news that Hogan was at less than full strength when he dropped his belt to The Warrior may explain WWF president Jack Tunney's ruling that there will be no rematch at the early future.

Tunney says that he couldn't in good conscience take responsibility for what the two men might do to each other when they next spar.

The Weekly World News first reported Hulk Hogan's retirement plans in the February 28 issue.

This new medical bombshell could speed up the Hulkster's departure.

FLASH RESULTS

The rugged Fiji native had the Canadian strong man set up for one of his patented drop off the top rope hits. Brown rolled away at the last moment and Snuka's role took the full impact when he hit the canvas. Brown then used a side suplex to finish him off.

In Youngstown, Ohio, Bad News Brown's three month personal vendetta for that entire country boy, Hillbilly Jim. SUICIDE SHOCKER

By SAMUEL TANNER

Quadruplets who made headlines when they were born in 1968 are back in the news after committing suicide at a family reunion.

Authorities confirmed that 24-year-old George, Roland, Robert and Cathy Morel took overdoses of sleeping pills and died during a get-together in Avignon, France.

At first, officials were baffled by the bizarre mass suicide. But they later learned that the quads had gotten extremely depressed when they went their separate ways after graduating from college.

"It's a terrible, terrible waste of human life," said Police Detective Robert Rubin. "The quads seemed to have everything to live for but deep down inside they were very unhappy people.

"When you get right down to it, they just couldn't cope with growing up. Like children, they expected to be together forever."

Friends confirmed that the Morel quads were devastated after they graduated from college last spring and landed jobs in different cities.

As George Morel told one pal last Christmas:

"When we split up it won't take losing a regular brother or sister. It's like we lost our arms and legs."

The quads reportedly telephoned each other as often as possible but their depression got progressively worse.

They finally arranged to meet for a long weekend at together in Avignon and for a while they appeared to be ecstatic.

Employees of the motel where they stayed said the Morels had dinner and drinks most of the day on Saturday.

"I've never heard of another suicide quite like it," said Det. Rubin.

"People are shocked. They watched the quads grow up because newspapers were always doing stories about them. Now they feel like they've lost members of their own families."

MOURNERS gather at grave of quadruplets who killed themselves after a family reunion.

Flat-chested Lilli Ann Pfeizer has sued the Air Force claiming she had a curvy figure until a low-flying jet passed over her — and caused her breasts to explode!

The 29-year-old Hamburg, West Germany, schoolteacher says the silicone implants in her chest burst and leaked into the surrounding tissue causing her pain, humiliation and disfigurement. She said one silicone implant in her cheek also exploded, as did still another implant in her right buttock.

"The jet was only about 60 feet high and seemed to be aiming for me," Mrs. Pfeizer testified in court. "Then I felt a stinging pain in my face and my bosom suddenly went flat. Seconds later, my right hip exploded, too.

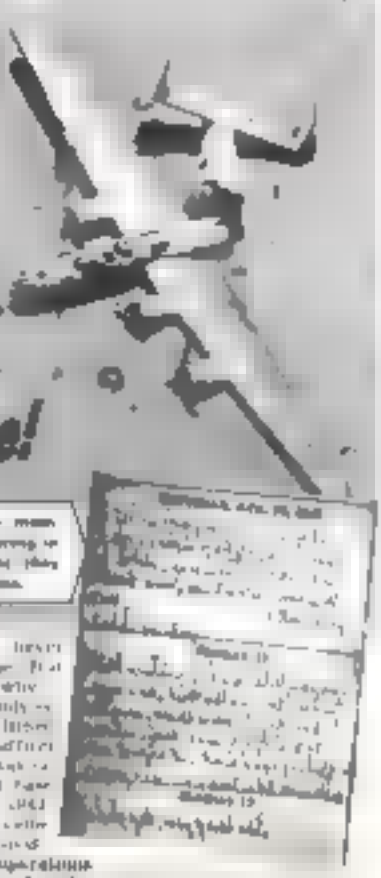
WW2 ghost plane mystery SOLVED!

The shocking truth behind crew's disappearance!



By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

One of the greatest aviation mysteries of World War 2 would never have been — and nine Americans might still be alive today — if an Air Corps officer hadn't turned his back on a shot-up B-24 trying to find its way home!

On April 4, 1943, a B-24 Liberator bomber named Lady Be Good returned without a crew while returning to its base in North Africa from a bombing raid on Naples, Italy.

The fate of the Lady Be Good remained one of the war's dark mysteries until 1958, when a research team looking for oil drilling sites stumbled across the ghost plane in one of the remotest parts of the Libyan desert more than 400 miles southwest of Benghazi.

Except for damage done in the wheels-up landing, the Lady Be Good was in almost pilot-ready condition.

Clothing and equipment were intact and in perfect shape and with a few minor repairs the engines could be started and the plane could be flown out of the desert.

Found in a German bottle was the Lady Be Good never made it safely home? If so, they didn't explain why.

The answer came only recently when Capt. Harry Ibbett, an Army Air Corps officer on the Lady Be Good's last flight, April night in 1943, after a distress call came in from the Lady Be Good.

Ibbett said the operations officer refused to break radio silence and give the crippled ship a position report. Even the pilot a plane to be guided down by radio was flatly refused — and the Lady Be Good flew into the night to her final [illegible] in the desert.

FINAL entries on crew members' diary tell of suffering as the 8 days ground along, they headed east on their plane.

FOR WEEK OF
Mon., Apr. 30-Sun., May 6

By Countess Sophia Sabah

ARIES

A positive cycle begins for you near the end of this week.

New business contacts will bring good results you didn't expect.

Your guest is be an individual works in your favor. Recognition comes in the form of increased cash flow.

Bring new understanding to sister or partner's problems. Your efforts will bring a stronger emotional bond to the relationship.

Accept an invitation offered for the weekend.

TAURUS

A good gamble never gambles — but taking a few calculated risks could bring you a great deal of happiness this week.

Life should be fun. Surround yourself with congenial people.

In love, don't settle for less than a warm, responsive companion. Show love is a top priority for you.

Your talents could find a good outlet in the musical or artistic world. If you decide to try, give your best.

Direct your attention toward success.

GEMINI

Don't let a [illegible] moodiness spoil your fun!

You can have a great time with your friends without offending your lover — just be long as you remain true, and don't do anything to raise his or her suspicions.

A plan that shows great promise for you will suffer if you decide to delay.

Treat yourself to some of that kindness and generosity you lavish on others.

Financial affairs improve soon.

CANCER

Strike up the band and surprise to your lover's content.

You can do no wrong around people this week, and might even happen a night-up with your one for life and laughter.

Don't get so carried away that you neglect your loved ones.

Your creative, especially, will appreciate a small gift or proof of your devotion.

You will be more than pleased with the way this week unfolds.

A calculated gamble succeeds.

LEO

[illegible] to see old friends with of your pal and go to [illegible] happiness and pea-

[illegible] planning the trip will raise your spirits — and put a smile back on your face.

Small financial risks promise to pay handsome dividends — just as long as you don't go overboard.

Your romance is hard to come by — but this week, you'll get all the romantic times you want and more without even trying!

VIRGO

There's nothing like a creative hobby to get your adrenaline flowing.

You're well advised to pursue it with gusto this week. There's unexpected cash to be made — and meaningful new friendships to be had.

Make plans to get away for a romantic week. A loved one could welcome the break from routine.

A thorough housecleaning this week is bound to make you extremely happy. You'll feel better about your home — and yourself.

LIBRA

Big changes are in the offing at home, in your finances and in love. Prepare yourself — and you'll come out smelling like a rose.

A loved one wants to bring you in-breathing happiness if, and only if, you shoulder some of the burden yourself.

Fabulous money-making opportunities abound, but you'll need the help of trusted friends to cash in on them — and shouldn't let foolish pride keep you from asking for assistance.

SCORPIO

An unexpected letter or telephone call heralds increased earning power that will banish your money woes.

Romance is on the horizon with someone who thinks you're wonderful.

Ask yourself if there's anything in your life you can't let go of.

The answer, of course, is no. Remember that.

Keep your eyes peeled for old money — or do it your self — and don't hesitate to reward yourself if you think you've found a "find."

SAGITTARIUS

Money may be coming your way out of the blue.

The windfall will give you the chance you've been waiting for. Make good use of it.

Romance is featured on your romantic heights in one you to a brand-new light.

Take advantage of your new image by playing hard to get — and you'll find out just how much love and attention you've been missing.

You're having more good luck than you know what to do with.

CAPRICORN

Help us yourself to get the job done, especially if you don't want to share the rewards.

In love, don't even think about settling for second best. Go for the gold! You are a winner.

You're charged with the energy you need to go after — and quickly accomplish — your most ambitious goals.

Resist the urge to blow your hard-earned cash on anything other than absolute necessities. Wait until next week — when a bargain crops up.

If your birthday is in this week . . .

A teary period is behind you now. Jump into the present with all that wonderful energy.

That first step is a long one, but after that you're off and running.

All signs point to big money success. Set a financial goal.

A sense of future security is worth the few small sacrifices it would take.

A romantic attraction from the past pays a return visit. A second time around could add up to a permanent relationship.

A high energy level enables you to tackle anything that comes your way.

In matters of choice, your number is 5.

AQUARIUS

Opposition to your plans will disappear when the time is right.

Whether single or married, dark clouds that have hovered over romance will soon vanish.

Take life one day at a time for a while. There is no need for impatience. The future will reveal its plans soon. All you will have to do is step onto a ready-set path.

Be prepared for anything.

It might help to step and count your blessings.

Relax over the weekend.

PISCES

A lucky break may come to you outside of your regular life.

Be sure how to capitalize on this opportunity.

Make sure you have time before committing yourself to a new project.

A friend's generosity will more than compensate you for earlier problems.

Pay more attention to anything strangers have to say.

A red-letter day for happiness and romance comes over the weekend.

Reporter posing as convict trapped 18 years in prison!

By RICK TRACY

A crusading reporter went undercover in a prison to expose corruption and was forced to stay there for 18 grueling years because of a bizarre chain of events.

"The warden wouldn't believe I was a reporter posing as a convict because the only two people who could prove that were dead," David Rex Beatine told The NEWS.

Beatine was freed from a Mexican prison last summer.

"I had stars in my eyes when I graduated from college in 1968. I wanted to expose all of the corruption in the world, and win all the world's life and win a Pulitzer Prize," said Beatine, who plans to write a book about his experiences.

Beatine had worked two years for a West Coast newspaper in 1973 when he suggested to his managing editor that he go undercover as an inmate to investigate reports of corruption and abuse in prison.

"My editor liked the idea

"The guards just laughed at my story" and convinced a judge to sign phony papers to commit me to prison for 20 years for burglary and rape," said Beatine.

"Only the judge and my editor knew about my assignment. We couldn't let the warden know for obvious reasons. As far as the warden knew, I was just another con."

Two weeks after Beatine was locked up, the judge died of a heart attack. Two days before Beatine was to send his watchdog undercover assignment, his editor was killed in a traffic accident.

"I was trapped. There was no one left to verify who I was and why I was in prison," said Beatine.

The frustrated reporter tried several times to talk to the warden. "He wouldn't even talk to me and the guards just laughed at my story," said Beatine.

Beatine, now 44, wrote letters to other reporters at the newspaper and to his dead editor's replacement. "They tried to verify my [redacted], but there was no way," Beatine said. "I was in prison under an alias with a phony background."

Beatine said he was released last summer after serving 18 years of his sentence. "Sure I'm happy, but who in the hell else I be mad at?" he said. "I can't blame the warden because every con in prison has got a cock-and-bull story."

He declined to tell The NEWS about his horrible 18-year experience. "I'm going to write a book. I've kept a daily log and a story to tell. All the corruption and sexual abuse that I suspected occurred in that prison. And a lot of it happened to me."

EITHER David Beatine is writing about his experiences.

Kansas Housewife Makes $825.00 A Day With A Simple Answering Machine

Gospel, Kansas is the last place you'd look for an average housewife or a cheap businesswoman. Actually she's both. Up until two years ago, Ellen, 33-year old mother of two was a typical, hard-working housewife doing her best to make ends meet. She always wanted to find a better way to give her family and herself some of the nicer things in life they just couldn't seem to afford.

For several years Ellen was sending off for various advertised "money plans," but none of them seemed to work. Then, two years ago, she hit pay dirt! She heard about a few people in Illinois who had developed an amazing money-making system that allowed housewives to make up to $825.00 a day working right from their own homes. Although the Illinois System did work well, Ellen has greatly improved it. With her new system you can make up to $825.00 a day or more with your ordinary, inexpensive phone answering machine. Best of all, you can make money 24 hours a day without ever talking to anyone. This system is totally different. All you need is her step-by-step start-up packet and a cheap answering machine.

To get FREE INFORMATION on how you can quickly profit with this Kansas housewife's amazing money plan, write to: W.O.R.E., Dept. WW93, 307 East Main Street, Gospel, Kansas

Underwater UFO base found in Pacific!

By NICOLAI BUSINOV
Correspondent

The captain of a Russian destroyer stared in amazement as a 30-foot-long metallic-looking cylinder rose slowly out of the sea and hovered silently in midair 40 feet away from his ship.

Then the mysterious object shot upward effortlessly and zoomed off toward the open sea as if driven by incredibly powerful rockets that made no sound.

The incident is one of 300 sightings of UFOs that emerge from underwater, all fully documented by a special scientific commission that was appointed by the Soviet government to investigate UFOs.

The sighting was reported by Captain Nikolai Petrov the commander of the 9,000-ton destroyer Vladimir Kerchyev. It occurred about 3 a.m. Jan. 18, 1980, in the Sea of Japan off the port of Vladivostok.

"Capt. Petrov reported to naval authorities that he had found evidence of an underwater base manned by aliens from outer space," said Dr. Boris Alexeyev, head of the special UFO commission.

Petrov told officials the UFO was metallic gray, with no visible portholes.

He said he watched it for more than three minutes as it hailed his ship in a give-like manner. [illegible] the object [illegible] the ship.

In another startling case a UFO popped out of the water and actually scraped the hull of a Soviet submarine cruising near the Kamchatka Peninsula.

The ship got quite a jolt as the spacecraft emerged," Dr. Alexeyev said. "There was no damage to the ship or to the crew, however, and the object quickly disappeared."

Russian destroyer Vladimir was buzzed by a 30-foot-long UFO

[illegible] personnel equipment, although everybody aboard was shaken up.

"The record of the incident was signed by the captain, every member of his crew and all 30 members of the reconnaissance aboard.

"That alone would like to have been on Earth good without saying," he said. "But hiding from us is not easy unless they're underwater."

He speculated that the UFOs may be carrying out underwater explorations to find new sources of minerals that could be of use to them.

Your Debt Problems are Over!

"Ex-Truck Driver Gets $21,108 a Month Doing What You Aren't"

By Neville G. Levin - Special Feature Writer

Orlando, FL — "Six days a week I work as a shopping 'SLOB/SD' - and I can make an average person and show them exactly how to do it," declares Lawyer Tabak.

Tabak began a few years ago with humble beginnings as a truck driver. But he soon didn't start to roll as until he discovered the tax-favored money making secret.

Now, as a real boss, Tabak has begun to train everyday people, just like himself, how to duplicate his own system.

Already the results have been astounding. For example, one person who Augustine wrote that they had made $6,500 in an unbelievable 21 days!

"I'm no smarter than you," he states, "only I have discovered an amazing wealth system."

"I'm no program can achieve," he says, "and you are allowed to keep your sparkling Mercedes, BMW, or Cadillac. You display your friends with your new dream home. And people see you achieving like a champion."

"It makes me [illegible] on cloud nine right!"

"You can really be the kind of person that you always wanted to be."

And what's more," he adds, "to make an extra $10,000, no way, requires little effort."

"Look, there's no magic involved, and you've got to have some drive and work. But it's worth it. In fact," he adds, "I really want people who are willing to put forth some effort to use it."

Now you can read and make as much as Tabak, but if you are a real "Go-Getter," you will make even more. And above all the nice part is that you will the respect of your friends and family.

Tabak has offered to send further details to readers who want to learn his new wealth system. Simply send your name and address to:

The untold story of the

LAST RIDE OF CASEY JONES

THE legendary Casey Jones often beat the rules.

By DICK DONOVAN

In the pre-dawn darkness of April 30, 1900, the Cannonball Express highballed out of Memphis, Tenn., bound for Canton, Miss., on a wild dash that was to end in disaster — and catapult a rascal called Casey Jones into history!

The Cannonball was 95 minutes late when it pulled out of Memphis for its 173-mile run down to Canton. But engineer Casey Jones had erased that deficit by the time it reached Goodman, 25 miles north of its destination.

Casey's hand was hard on the throttle as the Cannonball rumbled through the Mississippi countryside, unaware of the disaster that lurked just 10 miles down the tracks.

To make way for the crack passenger train, two long freights — one headed south, the other headed north — were switched into a siding. But the caboose and three cars of the southbound freight still protruded onto the main line.

The Cannonball's fireman, Sim Webb, was first to see the cars.

He shouted out a warning, then leaped to safety.

Casey Jones opened the throttle, hit the emergency brake and put the engine in reverse — then stayed with his train. It was a heroic but fatal decision.

The Cannonball Express slammed into the freight train with an explosive force that filled the air with debris. The massive engine was hurled off the tracks.

Casey was pulled from the wreckage and carried to the depot in nearby Vaughan. With blood gushing from a jagged hole in his throat, Casey was laid on the flatbed of a baggage cart, where he died minutes later.

Incredibly, Casey Jones was the only fatality.

Fireman Webb, an American Express messenger and three of the passengers were only slightly injured. Despite Webb's testimony that the sidetracked freight's flagman had not gone far enough down the track for Casey to have seen him in time, investigators blamed Casey for the accident.

Casey, having failed to heed the flagman's signals.

Railroad records reveal that Casey had been suspended nine times for terms of 5 to 30 days for safety violations between February 1893 and May 1900.

It wasn't all that unusual for engineers to be killed back in those days of heavy rail traffic on single tracks and the memory of Casey Jones and the Cannonball Express should have faded into oblivion. But a freight-yard worker, Wallace Saunders, wrote a ballad about Casey Jones and the Cannonball Express . . . and America had a new folk hero.

TRAIN wrecks were common during the railroad's heyday.

Possessed mom burned alive

A religious fanatic who helped Afil his mother and five others said she was possessed by the devil.

"I threw my mother into the flames and I cried, 'Be gone Satan.' It's true I was humbling as I did so," said Tavita Tupi.

Tupi is one of 34 villagers on trial in the Polynesian atoll of Raiti for the murders three years ago.

"I was loud at my mother but when I threw her into the fire, I didn't think it was my mother. Now I realize it was the evilest Seal I still think she was possessed," said Tupi.

COUNTESS SOPHIA SABAK'S

CELEBRITY PREDICTIONS

David Letterman will need plastic surgery after being pecked silly by a cantankerous parrot . . . Don Johnson dumps Melanie Griffith for a romance with Maria Maples . . . Roly-poly Roseanne Barr socks it to a gossip columnist with a platter of linguini.

Super psychic Countess Sophia Sabak takes a look into the future of our best known celebrities, providing NEWS readers with these and dozens of other predictions for the summer months ahead.

Here's what the world's most accurate clairvoyant and spiritual adviser sees in store for your favorite star.

Liberace's ghost will show up on TV screens across the nation in late summer — interrupting Roseanne and The Cosby Show by playing and then singing There's No Business Like Show Business for minutes at a time.

Comic pranksters Gary Coleman and Emmanuel Lewis will capture the imagination of sports fans and earn millions for charity by duking it out in Vegas this August. The boxing match will air on cable and go 11 rounds before Lewis cuts a lip and runs from the ring!

A bizarre "vanessa!" comedy starring dead actors and actresses will be the surprise hit of the summer. Special effects will make it appear as though the ghosts of legendary stars like Jack Benny, W.C. Fields and Lucille Ball are performing before a live studio audience with some of the brightest comedy routines in years!

DAVID Letterman will be leery when a crane for his show backfires and an irritated parrot swoops all his way!

Michael and Janet Jackson form a New Jackson 5 group, made up exclusively of their animals, that goes on tour, starting in Tokyo in August. Ticket proceeds go to Save The Animals.

By late summer, Fidel Castro will be booted out of Cuba by countrymen fed up with his dull and boring speeches. Glib-tongued talk show host Geraldo Rivera will be asked to be Cuba's new president.

The hottest Tinseltown item of the summer will be the steamy romance between Barbie doll beauty Brooke Shields and long-faded pint-size child star Mickey Rooney. Brooke's mother will be delighted at the prospect of having her girlhood costume idol as a member of the family.

America will be stopped and shocked this summer when several of Hollywood's sexiest beauties get AIDS. The situation will be so bad, stars will form a new no-sex club — Celebrity Celibates!

Dethroned heavyweight boxing champ Mike Tyson will leave America to begin a new life in Japan where he will launch a campaign to become that nation's greatest sumo wrestler of all time.

Tired of dieting, Oprah Winfrey will spearhead a new "Fat Is Beautiful" movement in August — and quickly balloon to more than 250 pounds!

Jim Mac Calmer's brush with the law left her so impressed that she will enroll in law school and prepare for a career as an attorney.

Ronald Reagan's doctors will reveal that the former president has suffered from Alzheimer's disease for the past eight years! The ailment is now so severe that Reagan cannot remember even the most basic facts, they say.

Fed up with the show-biz rat race, Eddie Murphy will announce to stunned reporters that he's taking a break from the silver screen to get a job as a police officer — in beautiful Beverly Hills! Rumor headlines in June will show a grinning Murphy telling the world: "I am sick and tired of make-believe — I want the REAL THING." By mid-summer Murphy will be writing parking tickets on Rodeo Drive.

In September late-night gabber David Letterman will be seriously injured during a taping of his show's "stupid pet tricks" segment. A dancing parrot will decide to peck the gap-toothed comic's ear off. But plastic surgeons work through the night to save Letterman's lobe.

Prince Albert will announce his engagement in August to a a producer's office demanding to play the Clark Gable part in the planned sequel to Gone With The Wind.

Liz Taylor and Shelley Winters will have a swimming pool belly flop contest for charity — and Liz will win with a monster splash!

Don Johnson will dump Melanie Griffith for Marla Maples.

A crazed female fan will pull off Sean Connery's hairpiece in a crowded shopping mall.

Dolly Parton will be up nowe in gossip columns by mid-July as the heartthrob of one of America's richest men, who has received lots of unwanted publicity in recent months.

Ladies-turning cutie Vanna White will quit TV's Wheel of Fortune to go to college and study physics.

Barry Manilow will tours with The Grateful Dead on a late-summer tour of 10 American cities in one of the strangest musical marriages ever. Manilow's curiously haunting rendition of the Dead's classic St. Stephen tune will lead to a collaboration on vinyl early next year!

Sylvester Stallone will drop his Rambo roles for an appearance as the ballet dancer Snowflake in the July filming of The Nutcracker.

21A 21A Cohen will leave show biz for a new career.

lawsuit will sue Roseanne Barr for $500,000 after The Tonight Show charges a platter of linguini and clam sauce over the writer's head at an Italian eatery.

Country singer Randy Travis will barely escape death when a helicopter crashes through the roof of his home just moments after Travis leaves on a shopping trip. The copter pilot will be seriously injured but will survive.

TV heartthrob Don Johnson (above) will dump wife Melanie Griffith for a romance with Marla Maples, right.

fall head over heels for a sexy college cheerleader and undergo hair-transplant surgery in a desperate effort to regain his youthful appearance. But his lush new locks won't be enough to win over the lovely temptress, who will return to her old beau — a college computer whiz.

Food-crazy comedian John Candy will have a new personal chef — then fire him after the first meal he fixes sends big John to the hospital to have his stomach pumped.

Tom Cruise will trigger one of the summer's weirdest fashion fads when he starts showing up in Hollywood hotspots sporting purple cowboy boots and a 10-gallon hat.

Stung to the quick by the critical rejection of his latest flick, Dick Tracy, aging lovebug Warren Beatty's career is on the rocks and he will quit the film biz and go back to his first love — playing piano in a cocktail lounge.

Unable to lose as much as an ounce to his ever, heavyweight star Marlon Brando will turn his bloated self over to health expert Dick Gregory
